DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

1. Claims 1 and 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The claims are for a curl straightening method for sublimation dye transfer papers, but, since the claims do not set forth any steps involved in the method, it is unclear what method applicant is intending to encompass. A claim is indefinite where it merely recites an intended use without any active, positive steps delimiting how the method is actually practiced.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

2. Claims 2 and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Mandel (US 5,123,895). Mandel discloses a decurling apparatus for image receiving paper comprising triangular spaced baffles which bends the paper in a direction opposite the curl of the paper. The paper follows along a single bent path to accomplish decurling. See Figures 2 and 3 and also see column 5, line 42 to column 6, line 13. The baffles are made up of pairs of parallel baffle plates. As can be seen in the figures, one set of plates is disposed downstream of another set of plates and at a angle thereto sufficient to impart a bent pathway for the paper.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 2-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Mitsuya (JP 9-188456). Mitsuya discloses a curl straightening device for image receiving paper. The device comprises a pair of guide plates 52a and 52b which are curved or bent at an acute angle. The paper is passed between the gap formed by the guide plates. The plates are curved or bent in a direction opposite to the curl of the paper passing through the plates. Mitsuya does not disclose separate guide unit, however, the bent guide plates are equivalent to the claimed first and second guide units, with the portion before the bend being the first guide unit and the portion after the bend being the second guide unit. Mitsuya also does not disclose the claimed lengths and angles, however, it is deemed that these are variables that one skilled in the art would recognize as being optimized with respect to the type of image receiving paper and degree of curl encountered in the image paper.

4. Claims 3-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Mandel (US 5,123,895). Mandel discloses a decurling apparatus for image receiving paper comprising triangular spaced baffles which bends the paper in a direction opposite the curl of the paper. The paper follows along a single bent path to accomplish decurling. See Figures 2 and 3 and also see column 5, line 42 to column 6, line 13. The baffles are made up of pairs of parallel baffle plates. As can be seen in the figures, one set of plates is disposed downstream of another set of plates and at an angle thereto sufficient to impart a bent pathway for the paper. Mandel does not disclose the claimed lengths and angles, however, it is deemed that these are variables that one skilled in the art would recognize as being optimized with respect to the type of image receiving paper and degree of curl encountered in the image paper.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

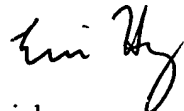

Kamata et al (JP 61-81353) discloses a paper decurling apparatus with two guide paths at a decurling angle of 130 degrees.
